Re: Docket 99P-0033/CP1.

I recently learned that the meat industry uses the practice of feeding dead animals to grazing live animals. I want to express my opinion.

This seems to me an abomination to nature, and I am appalled that a comparatively few people, motivated by the profit line, can think this is a working solution. Reasonable people would not agree. Evolution happened as it did for reasons. The people doing this think they are intelligent enough to get away with this, but its unnatural, presents a strong risk of communicable disease, and makes the incredible amount of sewage/pollution problems from the factory farms even more undesirable.

I admit I am uneducated about this subject, but I do know Mad Cow Disease exists, and in the US, and I would appreciate a letter explaining how they can condone this practice. I know a lot of people don't know about some of these things that go on. I didn't, and I'm sure the majority of others, hearing about this would agree with my views.

Sincerely,
